Celebrating 50 Years of Community-Led Oversight

*Mayor Coleman A. Young with the first
Board of Police Commissioners*

The first official meeting of the Board of Police Commissioners, July 22, 1974.

In 2024, the Board of Police Commissioners joined residents and stakeholders in celebrating 50 years of community-led oversight of the Detroit Police Department.

The Board's core mission, ensuring DPD provides fair and constitutional police services, has not changed since the original five members first met July 22, 1974. That historic meeting saw Mayor Coleman A. Young joining his appointed members: Clergy Leader Rev. Charles Butler, UAW Vice President Douglas Fraser, Wayne State University Law Professor Edward Littlejohn, Community Organizer Susan Mills, and Attorney & School Board President Alexander Ritchie. Together, they began to carry out Young's mandate to end police brutality and make the Police Department representative of – and responsive to – the city's diverse population. The five, like Mayor Young, were subjected to personal threats and sued by the police unions. They preserved to seek the reforms the community demanded.

Fifty years later, the community continues to demand improvement and change, especially as leading-edge technology and automation become

Voters approved a new charter creating the Board of Police Commissioners in 1973, when Detroiters also chose police reform, electing Senator Coleman A. Young for mayor over Police Commissioner John Nichols.

Mayor Young immediately disbanded STRESS, a police unit known for racism and brutality, and continued to work on improvements with the community and his five appointees to the Board.

standard police tools. The Board makes sure the public has a voice in shaping new policies, revising existing policies, and examining financial resources to meet today's challenges.

The interaction between police officers and people during traffic stops and other encounters remains a core indicator of police legitimacy and community trust. For the second year in a row, the Board saw a record number of public complaints filed about possible policy or procedure violations during police encounters. The trend in record-breaking complaints persisted as the City continued to see drops in homicides, non-fatal shootings, and other major crimes. The work envisioned by Detroit residents 50 years ago, to have safe neighborhoods and fair police treatment, is just as necessary today.

The Board's anniversary year had one other Charter milestone: it marked a dozen years since the 2012 Charter took effect. It ushered in a new era of civilian oversight with broader oversight powers and a larger, hybrid Board of 11 members, with four appointed by the Mayor subject to City Council confirmation and seven elected by district for four-year terms.

The Charter-mandated annual report includes summaries of the handling of complaints, crime trends, police officer demographics, and other data. At any time, however, the public can view recent data on the City website. It includes complaint updates on the Board's police accountability dashboard, launched in 2024 at detroitmi.gov/BOPC. It joins DPD and other public safety information available on the City's the data portal, a mandate from President Obama for greater transparency and access to government, at data.detroitmi.gov.

Complaints Against DPD

Overview

Through the City Charter, the Board of Police Commissioners has plenary authority over citizen complaints about non-criminal actions, including violations of police policy, procedures, standards or services. The Board has the power to appoint fact finders, subpoena witnesses, administer oaths, take testimony, and require the production of evidence. The Board routinely fulfills this charter-mandate through its Office of the Chief Investigator (OCI). The Board appoints a civilian professional to serve as Chief Investigator; the office includes senior investigators, line staff investigators, and administrative staff.

As part of the Board, OCI operates independently of the DPD chain of command. OCI investigates allegations about police officers, 911 operators, and other Police Department employees. During investigations, complainants receive periodic reports of case status. OCI sends a findings letter after case completion.

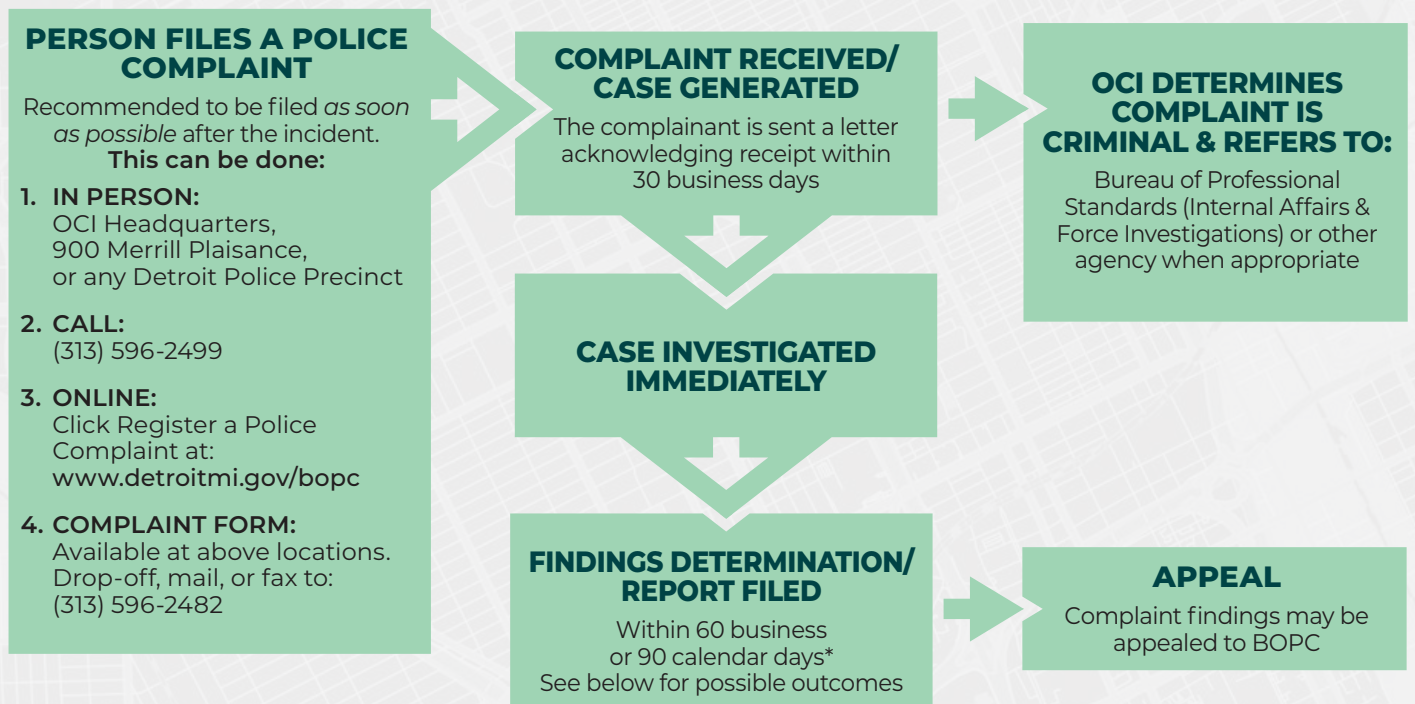

Because the Board handles non-criminal complaints, OCI must refer complaints alleging criminal acts to the Police Department for investigation by Internal Affairs or Professional Standards.

Any resident or member of the public can file a citizen complaint.

OCI Mission

The mission of the Office of the Chief Investigator is to fairly, effectively and objectively receive, investigate and make recommendations regarding complaints concerning the Detroit Police Department and its personnel. It is the goal of the OCI to assist in improving the quality of law enforcement services by instilling citizen confidence in the integrity of the Detroit Police Department.

SWORN OFFICER DEMOGRAPHICS AT A GLANCE

DETROIT POLICE DEPARTMENT and the National 30x30 INITIATIVE

The 30x30 Initiative launched to increase women in policing by having women make up 30% of recruiting classes by 2030. The goal is to address the under-representation of women in policing as part of improving public safety and police-community relations. The initiative is evidence-based and cites research that shows female officers use less force and less excessive force; are named in fewer complaints and lawsuits; and are seen by communities as more honest and compassionate. Research also shows women in policing see better outcomes for crime victims, especially in sexual assault cases, and make fewer discretionary arrests for non-violent misdemeanors.
