Wayne State University Police Chief Anthony Holt
40 Years of Dedicated Service

WHEREAS, In April 2019, CHIEF ANTHONY HOLT celebrated his 40th anniversary with the Wayne State University Police Department. A native Detroiter and son of a church minister, HOLT has deep roots in the Midtown/Cass Corridor area that stretch back at least 50 years. His first job as a college student was working at a full-service gas station on the corner of Second Avenue and Alexandrine. He also lived in the area on Prentis Street. HOLT joined the Wayne State police force after graduating from Wayne State with a sociology degree. His tenure extends to the late 1970s, when the Wayne State police force was a mere third of its current size. HOLT rose through the ranks to become chief in 2008; and

WHEREAS, CHIEF HOLT'S view of community policing is relatively simple; an effective police force must be an essential part of the community. In 2011, the launching of Live Midtown challenged CHIEF HOLT with a broader definition of his department's place and mission. He reorganized the department's resources, which were primarily devoted to the main campus and extended the boundaries. HOLT focused 80 percent of his resources on policing the perimeter of the campus to increase public safety on the campus and in the surrounding neighborhoods. CHIEF HOLT works relentlessly to analyze crime, establish partnerships, and involve the community. The department collaborates with multiple levels of law enforcement, including the Henry Ford Health System, Detroit Police, the Wayne County Sheriff, Detroit Medical Center police, and others. CHIEF HOLT has brought in a different method of policing, using COMPSTAT data-driven technology, surveillance cameras, and other high-tech devices. The campus police use the data to track crime reports, plot incidents on maps and zero in on patterns so decisions can be made on how to eliminate "hot spots" of criminal activity. At Wayne State, the crime-fighting initiatives are working - the force's quick response times and commitment to public safety have created an increasing counterweight to crime in the area; and

WHEREAS, CHIEF ANTHONY HOLT is widely respected throughout the law enforcement community as a disciplined leader and consummate professional with the proven ability to deliver results. NOW, THEREFORE BE IT

RESOLVED, That the Detroit City Council and Council President Brenda Jones, hereby congratulates and commends CHIEF ANTHONY HOLT for his significant contributions to the Wayne State University Police Department and the City of Detroit.
